in this ode to the earth and all its living creatures french djiboutian poet novelist and essayist abdourahman a waberi sounds the alarm about our imperiled planet where the sahel rises in you in me the red sea boils in you in me nunvut is melting in you in me this translation by nancy naomi carlson preserves the rich musicality of the original french as well as its frequent use of wordplay and often unusual word choice waberi a nomad at heart takes us on a whirlwind tour across north america africa and europe daring us to love the earth beyond all rational thought and to turn into earth both literally and figuratively as we turn from vanity fears and other pointless rustling these lyrical playful and moving poems urge us to look for the truth and beauty hidden in our daily lives singing of waberi s own enduring love for our endangered planet and also more forcefully exhorting us to join him in the collective fight to save our planet from destruction learning and not learning in the heritage language classroom a critical ethnography describes the first year of a teacher founded charter high school and presents a case study of compulsory spanish heritage language instruction with two spanish language teachers one english dominant and the other spanish dominant the study follows the same cohort of mexican origin students to their humanities english class bringing into focus what works and what does not with this group of learners unlike many spanish heritage language studies the students in this book did not choose to take part in spanish class and thus provide unusually raw feedback on their teachers and classes the engagement and resistance of these students suggests pedagogical directions for engaging spanish heritage language learners the book will be of interest to scholars administrators students and teachers involved in the delivery and assessment of heritage language classes
