this book offers the first quantitative study of decision making on the uk supreme court covering the court s first ten years it examines all stages of the court s decision making process from permission to appeal to the decision on the final outcome the analysis of these distinct stages shows that legal factors matter the most important predictor of whether an appellant will succeed in the supreme court is whether they ve been able to convince judges in lower courts the most important predictor of whether a case will be heard at all is whether it has been written up in multiple weekly law reports but legal factors mattering doesn t mean that judges on the court are simply identical expressions of the law the nature of the uk s court system means that judges arrive on the court as specialists in one or more areas of law such as commercial law or family law or even systems of law the court s scottish and northern irish judges these specialisms markedly affect behavior on the court specialists in an area of law are more likely to hear cases in that area and are more likely to write the lead opinion in that area non specialists are less likely to disagree with specialists and so disagreement is more likely to emerge when multiple specialists end up on the panel although political divisions between the justices do exist these differences are much less marked than the divisions between experts in different areas of the law the best way of understanding the uk supreme court is therefore to see it as a court of specialists
