this volume clusters together issues centered upon the variety of types of intensional semantics consisting of 10 contributions the volume is based on papers presented at the trends in logic 2019 conference the various chapters introduce readers to the topic or apply new types of logical semantics to elucidate subtleties of logical systems and natural language semantics the book introduces hyperintentional systems that aim at solving some open philosophical problems specifically the first three studies focus on relating semantics while the following ones discuss fundamental issues related to hyper intensional semantics or develop hyper intensional frameworks to address issues in modal epistemic deontic and action logic authors in this volume present original results on logical systems but also extend beyond this by offering philosophical considerations on the topic as well this volume will appeal to students and researchers in the field of logic

although david riesman wrote over half a century ago his concept of autonomy as presented in the lonely crowd 1950 speaks directly to the intellectual and emotional disarrangements of the twenty first century the current malaise produced by the excesses of commodity culture information technology the hyperreal and fake news militate against our ability to think critically about contemporary society and while postmodern authors insist that this bewildering situation weakens and assails our critical thinking skills riesman s notion of autonomy refuses to capitulate to such a somber interpretation rather he is convinced that individuals have the intellectual and emotional mettle to think for themselves and not be drawn into the demands of a commercialized culture and a commodity driven lifestyle as we pick and choose the terms of our engagement we can remain aloof from society s engulfing influence and preserve the oppositional thinking needed for democracy to illustrate this point most clearly this book puts riesman into conversation with the writings of theodor adorno whose evaluation of the critical faculty s ability to withstand the culture industry is famously pessimistic this paper investigates the effect of vivid language on investor judgments recent research finds that investor judgments are significantly influenced by disclosure tone positive versus negative holding tone constant we investigate investors reactions to vivid versus pallid information drawing on theories from psychology we predict that investors will be sensitive to the differences between vivid and pallid language when the underlying information is preference inconsistent but not when the information is preference consistent results of two experiments support our prediction vivid language significantly influences the judgment of investors who hold contrarian positions i e short investors in a bull market and long investors in a bear market interestingly vivid language has limited influence on the judgment of investors who hold positions consistent with the general tenor of the market our results provide evidence regarding when vividness matters and when it does not in financial contexts thereby contributing to both psychology and a growing literature on disclosure tone in financial reporting in addition our results also speak to concerns raised by regulators and academics asserting that vivid language can inflate bubbles and incite panics
