describes the history of armored vehicle use in the united states military their many uses and why they are important to military forces today armoured vehicles such as tanks reconnaissance and personnel carrying vehicles are essential for a wide range of military tasks since the 1998 strategic defence review the ministry of defence has attempted to acquire the vehicles it needs through a number of procurement projects however none of the principal armoured vehicles it requires have yet been delivered despite the mod spending 1 1 billion since 1998 including 321 million wasted on cancelled or suspended projects as a result there will be gaps in capability until at least 2025 making it more difficult to undertake essential tasks such as battlefield reconnaissance partly as a result of this 1 1 billion failure to yet deliver any armoured vehicles and to meet the specific military demands of operating in iraq and afghanistan the mod was provided with a further 2 8 billion from the treasury reserve to buy urgent operational requirements uor vehicles over the past six years the department has removed 10 8 billion from armoured vehicle budgets up to 2021 this has left 5 5 billion available for the next ten years which is insufficient to deliver all of the armoured vehicle programmes which are planned the mod needs to be clearer about its priorities and stop raiding the armoured vehicles chest every time it needs to make savings across the defence budget it will also need to set more realistic requirements in future if it is to deliver projects on time and to budget the committee expressed concern that the department was unable to identify anyone who has been held to account for the clear delivery failures further the mod has yet to balance its defence budget fully and devise a plan to close capability gaps despite having conducted the sdsr and two subsequent planning exercises it needs to determine its armoured vehicle equipment priorities and deliver these as rapidly and cost effectively as possible including making an assessment of which of its existing vehicles should be retained after combat operations in afghanistan cease
