examining turn of the century american women s fiction the author argues that this writing played a crucial role in the production of a national fantasy of a unified american identity in the face of the racial regional ethnic and sexual divisions of the period contributing to new americanist perspectives of nation formation the book shows that these writers are central to american literary discourses for reconfiguring the relationship among constituent regions in order to reconfigure the nation itself analyzing fiction by sarah orne jewett florence converse pauline hopkins maría amparo ruiz de burton kate chopin and sui sin far the book foregrounds the ways each writer s own location on the grid of american identities shapes her attempt to forge an inclusive narrative of america this disparate group of writers northerners southerners californios african americans chinese americans anglo americans heterosexuals and lesbians reflects the widespread nature of concerns over national identity and the importance of regions to representations of that identity the author argues that femininity as a politicized cultural construct is basic to each of these author s attempts to recast america because each understands the link between true womanhood and the longstanding equation of new england with the nation but such attempts to mobilize the naturalized feminine to stabilize a fractured and exclusionary american identity inevitably reveal the fissures that undermine the universality of both categories the book thus participates in several larger and ongoing conversations within american studies and feminist literary and genre criticism the reassessment of regional and minor fiction in relation to national identity the critique of the politics of genre construction the uses and limits of identity politics and the connections among all these issues challenging the classic horror frame in american film american filmmakers appropriate the look of horror in holocaust films and often use nazis and holocaust imagery to explain evil in the world say authors caroline joan kay s picart and david a frank in frames of evil the holocaust as horror in american film picart and frank challenge this classic horror frame the narrative and visual borders used to demarcate monsters and the monstrous after examining the way in which directors and producers of the most influential american holocaust movies default to this gothic frame they propose that multiple frames are needed to account for evil and genocide using schindler s list the silence of the lambs and apt pupil as case studies the authors provide substantive and critical analyses of these films that transcend the classic horror interpretation for example schindler s list say picart and frank has the appearance of a historical docudrama but actually employs the visual rhetoric and narrative devices of the hollywood horror film the authors argue that evil has a face nazism which is configured as quintessentially innate and supernaturally crafty frames of evil which is augmented by thirty six film and publicity stills also explores the commercial exploitation of suffering in film and offers constructive ways of critically evaluating this exploitation the authors suggest that audiences will recognize their participation in much larger narrative formulas that place a premium on monstrosity and elide the role of modernity in depriving millions of their lives and dignity often framing the suffering of others in a manner that allows for merely documentary enjoyment
