in spite of all the efforts made in fire prevention and suppression every year about 45 000 forest fires occur in europe burning ca 0.5 million hectares of forests and other rural lands the management of these burned forests has been given much less attention than fire prevention or fire suppression issues but the post fire management of burned areas raises strong concerns economic and social impacts soil erosion and water quality biodiversity loss forest restoration although there are a few publications which address post fire management the focus of these has been either on general approaches to restoration or specific topics such as preventing post fire soil erosion this book is about the post fire management of fire prone forest types in southern europe it provides the first comprehensive overview of the topic ranging from stand level to landscape level management and from emergency actions to long term restoration approaches bachelor thesis from the year 2018 in the subject business economics investment and finance grade 1.3 lmu munich institut für rechnungswesen und wirtschaftsprüfung language english abstract there are several studies that showed that on average 50% of all m.a. deals lead to a failure there are some explanations for the high rate of failures in empirical research e.g. hubris which is the overconfidence of the management as first mentioned by roll or managerialism still m.a. transactions take place frequently and shareholders do not prohibit them cartwright schoenberg suggest that this unchanged acceptance of shareholders for m.a. activities exists because there are some synergies or gains but the measures used in research do not acknowledge them properly they state that in a market environment such inefficiencies value destroying m.a. transaction are hard to believe i want to contribute to this debate by identifying describing and finally analyzing several measures that are used in research and apply them on the same sample according to thanos papadakis the used measure in a study seems to highly influence the outcome they found that return on assets roa measures often lead to a negative outcome while cash flow measures often lead to a positive outcome they state that the usage of several measures in the same study could lead to more robust results there are a lot of different measures used to analyze m.a. performance meglio risberg divide these measures into a financial domain including measures for market performance and measures for accounting performance and a non financial domain including measures for operational performance and measures for overall performance in my empirical analysis i will focus on accounting and market measures due to data availability the accounting measures can be separated into three major categories ratios growth measures and operating cash flows i will start with a literature review to examine what measures are used to measure m.a. deal performance in research therefore i categorize the accounting measures according to the framework of thanos papadakis like described above and add the market measure abnormal returns to my analysis following my literature review i will discuss the pros and cons of the different measures and which measures seem eligible in which situation after that i will analyze european m.a. transactions using data from the thomson eikon databank most research focuses on us m.a. deals which results in an underrepresentation of research for european transactions by analyzing the latter i address this problem
