As hip-hop artists constantly struggle to keep it real, this fascinating study examines the debates over the core codes of hip-hop authenticity as it reflects and reacts to problematic Black images in popular culture, placing hip-hop in its proper cultural, political, and social contexts.

Hip-hop made is a journey to and through the history of hip-hop and its culture. Written by Bronx native El David, the reader is taken on a drop-top ride through verse and flow with images and excerpts from some of hip-hop's earliest and hottest tracks.

Meet the stars of today and the future.

Straight up talk on hip-hop culture.

Now a global and transnational phenomenon, hip-hop culture continues to affect and be affected by the institutional, cultural, religious, social, economic, and political landscape of American society and beyond. Over the past two decades, numerous disciplines have taken up hip-hop culture for its intellectual weight and contributions to the cultural life and self-understanding of the United States. More recently, the academic study of religion has given hip-hop culture closer and more critical attention. Yet this conversation is often limited to discussions of hip-hop and traditional understandings of religion, and a methodological hyper-focus on lyrical and textual analyses. Religion in Hip-Hop: Mapping the Terrain provides an important step in advancing and mapping this new field of religion and hip-hop studies. The volume features 14 original contributions representative of this new terrain, within three sections representing major thematic issues over the past two decades. The preface is written by one of the most prolific and founding scholars of this area of study, Michael Eric Dyson, and the inclusion of and collaboration with bernard bun b freeman fosters a perspective internal to hip hop and encourages conversation between artists and academics
