the question of what constitutes an armed conflict has featured prominently in international law debates however international lawyers have paid less attention to the inextricable question of who is engaged in a conflict focusing solely on whether there is an armed conflict against this backdrop alexander wentker's party status to armed conflict in international law explores why it matters and how it is established that a state international organization or armed group is a party to an armed conflict the first part of the book demonstrates that party status is central at all levels of the international legal regulation of armed conflicts with parties to armed conflict being both key addressees of international law and central reference points for regulating individuals and third parties in response to increasingly widespread cooperation practices the book's second part advances an analytical framework for identifying parties to conflicts with multiple parties on the same side or co parties party status to armed conflict in international law is aimed at academics students and practitioners seeking to understand how armed conflicts are legally regulated it presents readers with a refined account of how responsibilities are allocated in armed conflicts enabling deeper insight into how international law can best respond to the realities of contemporary conflicts in this informed incisive and passionate commentary on the state of nature and conservation mark Avery reflects on our relationship with the wildlife around us from the cats that pass through his garden to the chronic decline of farmland wildlife from the pasqueflowers he visits every spring to the proportion of national income devoted to saving nature everything is connected and everything is considered this book analyses what is wrong with certain ways we do wildlife conservation but explores some of its many successes too how can we do better to restore wildlife to everybody's lives we know how to conserve species and habitats it's time to roll out conservation measures on a much bigger scale this is a societal choice in which every nature lover can play their part reflections sets out what is needed and what part the state environmental charities and we as individuals can play in making that happen this highly personal work from a life embedded in and dedicated to nature does not shy away from the harsh realities we face but its message ultimately is one of hope the national conservative government of Hungary has been heavily criticised for its violation of EU values primarily the rule of law in recent years this book looks to the bigger picture in examining the rule of law debate between Hungary and the EU it explores how certain elements of various Hungarian constitutional reforms are interrelated and how the EU has failed to address the situation properly it is argued here that the reason the EU has been unable to enforce its values effectively in Hungary stems from the misunderstanding that Hungary kept the institutional design of liberal democracy but made it dysfunctional the debate with the EU is characterised as a dialogue of the deaf as the EU insists on advancing the rule of law agenda while the Hungarian government defends itself by alluding to its democratic legitimacy the author contends that the Hungarian government is in fact playing a charade while the actions of the EU maintain this drama the book will be of interest to students academics and policymakers working in the areas of constitutional law and politics EU law and populism a new way to tackle the real politics of climate change through asset revaluation it's no secret that the Paris Agreement and voluntary efforts to address climate change are failing governments have spent three decades crafting international rules to manage the climate crisis yet have made little progress on decarbonization in existential politics jessica green explains why this is unsurprising governments have misdiagnosed the political problem of climate change focusing relentlessly on measuring reporting and trading emissions this technical approach of managing tons ignores the ways that climate change and climate policy will revalue assets creating winners and losers policies such as net zero carbon pricing and offsets all cater to the losers owners of fossil assets ultimately green contends climate change is a political problem climate politics should be understood as existential creating conflicts that arise when some actors face the prospect of the devaluation or elimination of their assets or competition from the creation of new ones fossil asset owners such as oil and gas companies and electric utilities stand to lose trillions in the energy transition thus they are fighting to slow decarbonization and preserve the value of their assets green asset owners who will be the basis of the decarbonized economy are fewer in number and relatively weak politically green proposes using international tax finance and trade institutions to create new green asset owners and constrain fossil asset owners reducing their clout domestic investments in green assets facilitated by global trade rules can build the political power of green asset owners
